Winter Park Garden Club
at Mead Garden

The Winter Park Garden Club (WPGC) was founded in 1922 to promote gardening and to beautify the City of Winter Park. The objective of WPGC is to further the education of members and the public in gardening, horticulture, botany, landscape design, conservation of natural resources, civic beautification, public sanitation and natural studies.

Garden History

Flourishing in Winter Park amid homes, businesses and academic environments is Mead Botanical Garden (MBG). The original non-profit organization dedicated it in 1940 to world-renowned horticulturist Theodore L. Mead. MBG is 47 acres of uplands, wetlands, a flowing creek, a pond, and a remnant stand of longleaf pine.

In 2003, the Friends of Mead Garden (now Mead Botanical Garden, Inc.) formed a new partnership with the City of Winter Park to focus on restoring and enhancing the garden. Building upon the past and responding to a renewed awareness of environmental issues, the group continues to look at new possibilities for this Winter Park treasure. With the help and dedication of many volunteer organizations and individuals, the garden's master plan advances.
